ENDORSEMENTS

The following are views of JC2033 from 33 prominent Christians. Whether it be at the Vatican, Israel, USA, Kenya, New-Zealand, United Kingdom, Egypt, Netherlands, Armenia, Australia, Lebanon, or India, there is a common thread among these quotes of: joy, the desire to see unity, and a sense of anticipation.

"This is a very beautiful project, a very big project! Thank you for doing this. Unity comes by walking together."

Pope Francis, Bishop of Rome, Vatican

"The resurrection is the foundation of the Christian faith. Without it our message is empty. We celebrate Easter with enthusiasm. This feast is the most important in the Orthodox Church, more so than in any other church. The joy of the resurrection dwells in us and we sing it with all creation."

Patriarch Bartholomew I, Ecumenical Patriarch and Primate of the Greek Orthodox Church of Constantinople, Istanbul, Turkey

"Olivier Fleury has an exciting vision for Christians to join together to celebrate the 2,000th Easter Day. I applaud his inspiration and commitment and look forward to joining together with millions of others as together we give thanks for the greatest event in the history of the world: the resurrection of Jesus!"

Nicky Gumbel, Director Alpha International, UK

"I believe that there is no event in the history of the universe, other than the creation of the universe itself in the first place, which equals that of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. It seems to me compelling and marvellous that a vision has been given by the Lord to celebrate the 2000th anniversary of the resurrection of Jesus. May the Lord move believers in his church worldwide to prepare for this momentous celebration."
Michael Cassidy, Founder of Africa Enterprise and the National Initiative for Reconciliation, South Africa

"The bible movements are all saying that by 2033, we will have a bible in all 7000 languages for all the peoples of the world. What a wonderful present to offer Jesus for the 2000 anniversary of the resurrection. So come be a part of this historic celebration wherever you are in the world."
Loren Cunningham, Founder of YWAM, USA

"2033 is not a commemoration of a past event, it is the beginning of a radical change in millions lives!"
Joosep Keum, former Director of the Commission on World Mission and Evangelization, World Council of Churches (WCC), Switzerland

"The great potential of an initiative such as JC2033 lies in rooting the Christian witness in the celebration of the resurrection of Jesus Christ. The witness of Christians who, united in the name of Jesus, celebrate the love of God the Father for humankind and the life-giving power of the Holy Spirit is crucial for an effective proclamation of the gospel. If it is the lifting of the cross of Christ that draws us together; it is the resurrection that sends us forth to witness, united in the Risen One and strengthened by the love of the Holy Spirit."
Teresa Rossi, Centro Pro Unione, Rome, Italy

"I believe that JC2033 will be the greatest opportunity in this generation to present Jesus to the world. This gives unprecedented hope for the future."
Paul Eshleman, former Vice President of Campus for Christ, USA

FOREWORD

By Nicky Gumbel

On 17th April 2033 (Easter Day) we will celebrate the 2000th anniversary of the resurrection of Jesus. Jesus told us to “go and make disciples of all nations” and he has given us nearly 2000 years so far. Wouldn’t it be wonderful if in the next ten years we could make the message of Jesus available to everyone on the planet?

That is why I am so pleased that Olivier Fleury has written this book. I have known Olivier for more than 25 years and his passion for Jesus Christ is extraordinary.

Now he is writing about this amazing vision to reach the world with the gospel of Christ by Easter Day 2033.

The Bible translators are working on having the New Testament in 99.96% of the languages in the world by 2033, with 25 chapters of the New Testament translated into every language.

Meanwhile the influential American church leader Rick Warren is working on 'A Bible, a believer, and a body of Christ' in every community.

Pippa and I have met with 70 Catholic organisations working on different aspects of the 2033 vision. And we in Alpha have a vision to make the course available to everyone on the planet by 2033.

The greatest injustice in the world is never to have heard about Jesus. The greatest act of love is to introduce someone to Jesus.

As Olivier makes clear in this book, God has given us a vision to work together with all the different churches, denominations, and organisations to get the good news of Jesus Christ, crucified and risen from the dead, out to everyone on the planet by the 2000th anniversary of his resurrection.

Join us!

PREFACE

by Olivier Fleury

Do you know what you will be doing the morning of April 17, 2033?

I know what I'll be doing. To ask someone to project themselves so far into the future can naturally be bewildering, especially when most people can't imagine where they will be in one week, what they will eat tomorrow or what kind of work they will have in a month.

What will you be doing on April 17, 2033? I have asked this question to people all around the globe. Some look at me with a twinkle of amusement in their eyes, others lower their brow with scepticism. Most are surprised, some begin doing all sorts of calculations in their head: how old will they be, will they be retired, how old will their children be, will they still be alive? Naturally, they presume I am not asking a random question; there is more to it than just small talk. This farsighted project is the topic of this book.

To know twenty years from now and on a specific day... this personal conviction isn't of my own but of my God, the living God who revealed himself through Jesus Christ.

I am a man like any other, a normal simple person in my eyes. These same eyes had a vision of something outside of myself, supernaturally communicated like the visions we can read about throughout the Bible. The Apostle Paul became a Christian after seeing a vision of the resurrected Christ. Hundreds had a similar experience during the forty days following the Christ's resurrection. For the past 2000 years, millions of men, women and children have had their own personal revelations. Let me explain what happened to me and what I have passionately pursued ever since.

Imagine...

Imagine... the dawn of resurrection Sunday 2033, when light breaks forth on a new day!

Imagine... the greatest celebration in all of history: 2000 years since Jesus Christ's resurrection!

Imagine... the worldwide body of believers gathering in all regions of the Earth!

Imagine... the Church demonstrating tangible love and sincere unity to the world!

Imagine... *JC2033!

THE VISION

Before my eyes a vivid image appeared more real than a movie. Gravity was eluding me. Before me, our blue planet and the Sun was rising. As the first rays of sunlight beamed into the waking Earth, one time zone after another, I saw eruptions of light that emanated from the Earth and extended up into the sky. Thousands of these glorious columns of light spread across the earth and penetrated the dark emptiness of space, filling it with light.

We left Switzerland in 2007 for one year and went to Australia. The goal was to enhance our biblical training at our church's affiliated international campus, the Christian City Church (C3) of Oxford Falls, a suburb of Sydney.

The summer months of 2007 were already nearing an end. The morning of March 7 was my turn to go straight to my courses. Yesterday, I took our boys to school before meeting my wife Sylviane, in class.

Today, the roles were reversed: she took care of them as I grabbed my bag and Bible and set out chewing my toast trying to keep the honey from dripping off.

"Good day Nathan, g'day Rémy, see you later Sylviane!"

I didn't want to keep our neighbor Sarah waiting. We were taking the same course and she kindly offered to drive. The atmosphere was fresh and light; I could already feel the sun's warmth at 7:00 am, and the birds were busy with their morning chorus. A wonderful joy accompanied me, so I began to worship my maker, thankful to experience this new school year. The reality of his presence, by my side, surrounding me, was awe-inspiring. I looked up into the sky, my eyes eager to pierce through the canvas of this world and peer into the mysteries of the heavenly host. Today was going to be unique; everything within me resonated with anticipation.

This morning, the founder of the C3 church movement and the Oxford Falls Bible School, Phil Pringle, would speak in the grand auditorium. Every month the 450 students gathered together with the staff for a praise and worship time, followed by a message from the founder.

As I arrived, the worship team was busy warming up. I found a comfortable spot in the front and shuffled over to the third aisle. A sense of God's presence was all around; the auditorium walls seemed to reverberate God's heart, and the worship team played in unison, harmonizing their instruments. The drums gave the rhythm, the keyboard filled the air with its melody and the guitar vibrated with electric riffs. We worshiped with all our capacities and offered our thanks and praise to God.

I love to worship God! It is during these moments, surrounded by other believers, that God has repeatedly touched the deep things of my heart; my emotions and my longings, they are all bare before him. This morning something unusual transpired. I was there in the natural world, and yet my eyes could also see something in the spiritual world. Two worlds normally superimposed became distinct, one in the natural, while the other was like a film that unraveled before my spiritual eyes. The Holy Spirit drew near me and his presence imparted a revelation. I could see it, feel it, and with my mind, understand it.

In an instant I could see the rotating Earth from outer space. The Earth was waking up. I saw a dividing line between the retreating darkness and the dawning light. The light advanced through one time zone after another. Where the line advanced, flares of light burst forth and emanated into the sky. These bright flashes were not dangerous or harmful; on the contrary, they were full of warmth and harmonious, radiating joy and love. Wow! It was such an overwhelming beauty and power unfolding before my eyes.

Then suddenly I gazed over a vast crowd of people, diverse in all their colours and physical attributes. Thousands upon thousands were gathered and worshipping God. Within stadiums and parks and city centres, in rural areas, vast fields and plains, wherever there were people, there was worship. These were the bursts of light that had radiated from the Earth. Even more, the morning light that engulfed the Earth was resurrection Sunday. From the East to the West, time zone after time zone, in thousands of cities, millions of people testified to the truth of Christ and were celebrating his resurrection.

After a while I sat down and felt compelled to write of my experience. The thought of losing the essence of what had just transpired through my being stirred me to scribble a depiction of these scenes with comments about the vision. But God wasn't finished with me. The worship band was still fully immersed in their praise and I got up once again to praise God with all my heart.

There, again, thoughts flooded my spirit; little by little it came together, I sat and wrote, then got up and continued to worship and sat down again, filling my pages with God's revelation.

It's better to listen to God

My heart pounded with feelings of revival. The Bible speaks in the book of the Acts of the Apostles of how God stirred the hearts of the early church. Was he stirring our hearts now? Is this what it meant to bask in his presence?

This wasn't the first time I experienced an outpouring of his love. Ten years prior in 1997, while attending a Bible college (Christ for the Nations Institute) in Dallas, Texas, the Holy Spirit moved so powerfully in our midst that the classes were suspended for two weeks! Students held all-night prayer vigils and basked in his personal touch. We repented, worshiped and adored him, deepening our relationship with Jesus as we drew closer to him with our sweat and tears.

The worship time drew to a close, and soon Phil would take the stage. I had an urge to quickly go and plead with Phil to sense the Spirit and reconsider. It seemed so much richer to continue my dialogue with God than to switch focus onto Phil's message. This urge dwindled somewhat when I considered what I was about to do. Phil Pringle is a man of stature, overseeing 300+ churches all over the world, and is clearly a man of God with an important message to share. Alas, I stopped wrestling within myself, as it was too late. He bounded up onto the platform with his characteristic athletic style. As for me, the "downloading of heavenly files" continued, and I pleaded with God not to stop. Phil began to address us:

"My friends, I hope you are experiencing the same thing as myself this morning. God is working profoundly in our hearts, I have decided not to preach and leave you the freedom to commune with Jesus. Be open to receive from him the abundance that he has in store for you."

Praise God!

For the next thirty minutes the auditorium was filled with personal prayer and devotion. The atmosphere was rich with individual consecration and fervor for God. Hearing Phil's receptivity to what was going on launched me like a catapult back into my vision with God. This time I heard clear words:

The whole Earth will partake in celebrating the 2000 years of Christ's resurrection. No nation, tribe or people group will be left out or forgotten. Enthusiasm and anticipation will overjoy those gathered to witness the dawn of resurrection morning. It will be the culmination of a joyful season. However, remember that under no circumstances should you associate this celebration with Christ's return. When Jesus returns is not your problem; he can come before, during or after the celebration. He will return when the Father in heaven decides and it is not given to men to know when.

Then Phil came back to the microphone. He thanked God for drawing close to us and encouraged us to remain attentive to the Holy Spirit! But I didn't want to leave this heavenly atmosphere. I had the impression that this wasn't the end. I couldn't just go about my morning like every other. There was still so much to hear and see and absorb and write down. I felt exhausted and almost dizzy, yet at the same time energized and refreshed. The auditorium started to clear out, and with my time constraints I jotted down some last thoughts before I meandered off to class.

Among those mind flashes, I saw the potential for colossal exposure, with huge billboard promotions. The world's media was focused on the event. Some mocked the Christian community and accused them of trying to draw attention to themselves. Whatever the motivation, everyone was talking about Jesus, so much so that not a single person on Earth hadn't heard of his rebirth: the 2000 years of Jesus's resurrection! <sup>1</sup> Christians stirred up with boldness were proclaiming their faith in Christ. So many gatherings were being held around the globe that we even lost count!

The vision of Israel

What a humbling experience for a Swiss like myself with a watch embedded into my head to be late for class. Not only late, I arrived last. The other students were ready to take notes from our professor, Brett Barclay. Brett loves God, which is evident when he speaks as inspired by the Holy Spirit, and he is reflective, with tremendous knowledge to impart to his students. As soon as Brett began to speak, I was propelled once again into that spiritual dimension. This time it came like a movie script, the focus of which seemed to centre on the holy city of Jerusalem, where Jesus was resurrected.

Many will want to celebrate the resurrection in Jerusalem. We informed the Israeli government how pilgrims from around the world would flood into the city. They denied us from organising anything for security reasons and barricaded the city. They sent us north to assemble in a plain where it was flat, and I saw an airport. There were civilian airplanes landing on the runway from all over the world and buses loaded with passengers. This plain seemed enormous; I could only guess that the number of people gathered was hundreds of thousands.

My hand started to hurt as I scribbled down everything going through my mind. I glanced at the time and realized that I hadn't a clue what was going on in class. For forty minutes my concentration had been elsewhere, and then I heard Brett say:

"Olivier, what do you think about that?"

"Uh, I'm terribly sorry I didn't hear your question," I said.

"Actually, I haven't heard a word of what you said. I'm experiencing something like never before. I'll catch up the class, and I'm happy to explain it later, but right now please accept that I'm completely out of tune with today's topic."

"Okay, we can talk about it later if you like."

He looked at me with an inquisitive face, then continued where he left off. This released me to dive back into my thoughts. They came like little packages, bundles of information, but I didn't have time to develop the ideas as they stacked up like children at the water slides waiting their turn to take their plunge.

Then the bell rang for a fifteen-minute break, and everyone shuffled around me, with books closing, chairs squeaking, and classmates chatting. Nothing broke my concentration. The internal dialogue was louder than any of the animated discussions that surrounded me.

There are another twenty years to go with many influential people to meet. I'm going to have to share this vision for it to grow. People in positions of authority, who carry high responsibilities, must hear of it. I won't be alone. There are others. God is in the process of talking with them. I have to find these people, God, please lead me to these people.

Another bell rang, and the class prepared to continue. I grabbed my things, with a polite gesture to our professor, and bolted for the door. I squeezed past the other students who were all making their way back in.

While classes were going on, I found refuge in the campus chapel. This beautiful round room with comfortable sofas and carpets was the perfect place to bask in God's presence, and as I set my things down to prepare to listen, the "downloading" continued.

This time, Bible verses sprang forth. One after another, different texts came to light, and I saw them like never before. It was like doing an intensive Old Testament Bible study with Jesus as my tutor. My attention was centered around the Hebrew people who fled Egypt and wandered in the desert, waiting to enter the Promised Land. They were the successors of Abraham, who received a promise and mandate to be a blessing to all nations.<sup>2</sup> Some churches have also experienced miracles just as the Israelites of Moses's time had. Yet they, too, are wandering in circles, more preoccupied by what happens within their walls than what happens outside. When we go and make disciples of all nations as Jesus mandated for the church,<sup>3</sup> then will we be a blessing to them.

After some time, I could feel I was entering into a new phase, one that is best described in computer terms as an “upload.” Receiving from God was coming to a close and now I was to give back; but, more importantly, to intercede for this vision, to carry it and nurture it, to pray for the church that it could receive it. This vision was like a new-born baby, tender, fresh, and vulnerable, and I implored God to grant me strength, to not abandon me, to preserve this beautiful vision that had managed to weave itself into the fabric of my being.

That experience alone with God took every last ounce of strength I had, and stretched me like dough spread out for pizza. My body lay flat on the floor; it went into the furnace for purification, my spirit called out to him with tears as sweat dripped down my head. I cried out to God, I proclaimed victory, I expressed myself in every way transparent before God without shame.

Never have I experienced the presence of God in such a tangible form in my life. Though the experience was not visual, every other sense knew he was there. I sang psalms and hymns to him, and worshiped him for all that he is. His presence was powerful yet gentle, like a lioness who carries her cubs in her mouth. The contrast was captivating. After some time it subsided; as God’s grace filled me with a sense of awe, my soul was invigorated, but I became aware of how exhausted my body had become. The Bible speaks of a peace that surpasses all understanding.<sup>4</sup> This peace was dense and filled the chapel, like a room full of buzzing computers when somebody pulls the main power plug. I noticed the absence of sound, and with it the absence of God.

My marathon with God was over. I leaned on a piece of furniture to get up, and remembered Sylviane was waiting, right about then, in the cafeteria for me. How will I explain to her what just happened? Will she understand or think I’ve gone crazy? As I left the chapel and grabbed my belongings, my left leg didn’t support my weight; it seemed to have fallen asleep, a bit like the feeling after a long bike ride. Something felt numb and I limped to the exit. It didn’t relent all day, nor the following day; the intensity lasted ten days. For the next four months I could feel that same sensation in my left hip. In the years to come it would sporadically reappear, particularly when on trips to speak about JC2033. I interpret this as a reminder of what I experienced with God that day, a heart-to-heart and body-to-body encounter. Is this humbling experience how Jacob felt after his encounter with God in the desert?<sup>5</sup>
